Standing Liberty Quarter

Efforts to make America's everyday coinage more artistically appealing reached a peak in 1916 with the introduction of the Mercury Dime, the Walking Liberty Half Dollar and the Standing Liberty Quarter. Struck in the final weeks of December and released in January of the New Year, the 1916 Standing Liberty Quarter has one of the lowest mintages of any 20th century coin issued for actual circulation.

To avoid any showing of belligerence during World War I, the Bald Eagle was shown in peaceful flight on the reverse of the design introduced in 1916, rather than the usual perched bird clutching the arrows of war.

Thirteen stars surround the eagle, with seven to its left and six to the right. The reverse design was slightly modified with the introduction of the 1917 issue. The eagle in this version is surrounded by five stars to the left, five to the right and three stars below it. Also the obverse design was altered to put chain mail on Miss Liberty in 1917.

COIN TRIVIA

In 1859 at the Philadelphia Mint, a new obverse half dime die was used, not employed anywhere else in the regular series. The stars were hollow in the center and the arms of Liberty were slimmer.

Did You Know?

Under the Pittman Act of 1918 hundreds of millions of long stored dollars were melted for the war effort. However in May 1921 a hurry-up call was issued for more silver dollars to back the silver certificates. The new Peace design was not ready so the old Morgan motifs were dusted off and used. The 1921 Morgan dollar reverse hubs were of lower relief than those of earlier years. The working dies were more susceptible to voids in the design when they were polished before use.

In the last week of December 1921 the Peace dollar was minted without real testing. This created two versions of silver dollars for 1921 (Morgan & Peace dollars).

A well-made 1921 Peace dollar is something of a rarity. The 1,006,473 struck in 1921 were distributed early in 1922 to generally favorable remarks except for the quality of striking. Throughout 1922 there were many die changes to improve to life of the working dies.

Because of what was intended as a high relief design and production problems at the time not all 1921 Peace silver dollars were created equally. A number of coins in uncirculated condition were saved in early 1922 because of the first year of the new design.

Next Month's meeting is December 17th

Guidelines for submitting coins for the monthly auction

1913 Buffalo Type 1

Raised Ground

When submitting coins for the monthly auction always try to use the printed club submission form. The club form lists the current submission rules. To conserve printing costs, take one or two blank forms and make addition copies as needed. Submit individual coin in a flip or 2x2 holder. Flatten the staples of a 2x2 holder with pliers. This will protect your coins as well as the submissions of others from damage caused by the raised staples when coins are stacked for transporting. When completing the submission form always verify the date and mint mark on your coin. Coins submitted without a reserve minimum tend to sell for higher prices than submissions with a reserve that's close to the actual value.
